CREATING YOUR FAMILY'S COUPON ORGANIZER

Creating a method to the madness

BINDERS

Binders are perfect for couponers with a little experience, as they are often more heavy duty and can hold more items than other methods. Be sure to utilize trading card sleeves and dividers to create the binder that best suits your family's unique needs.

ENVELOPES

For those just starting out, envelopes can help you organize by store, grocery type, or aisle. They also have the benefit of being a fairly inexpensive starting point for those who aren't sure if they are completely sold on the couponing lifestyle.

EXPANDING FILES

Expanding files are great for couponers, as they have the benefit of providing a lot of real estate on the inside, while staying streamlined and slim on the outside. They are also sturdy and can easily slide into a tote bag, so that you can grab and go!

WALLET APPS

There are several apps available on your smart phone that allow you to gather online coupons into one place. If you don't like any of the apps, create your own digital filing system using phone screen shots and place them into folders within your camera roll.

RECIPE BOX

Small boxes, especially those with built in dividers, are a sturdy way to store your coupons. There, you can also keep index cards with your family's favorite recipes for easy access while you're planning your shopping list.

CUSTOMIZED CLUTCH

If you're the crafty type, it's relatively simple to create a couponing clutch that's both fun and functional. These are excellent organizers because you can customize the colors and patterns based on the coupons that they were made to store. For your produce aisle, a fun veggie print could add a little cheer to your shopping trip.
